The newspapers outside of Washington which have discussed the matter of the coming appointment to our local postmastership seem to agree that the President will satisfy a strong desire on his part to fill the office with a citizen of the District, unless he becomes embarrassed by the conflicting claims of local candidates. One might infer from their comments that the President. While perfectly able to weigh conflicting claims to other offices, and to pass upon the individual merits of applicants, must fall immediately into extraordinary confusion, and, in a spasm of embarrassment, present a District office to some outmider, if it so happens that more than one applitween a few of the District democrats furnishes no justification whatever for the suggestion of this early Monday, please. curious sort of vertigo, which is pictured as doing violence to the wishes both of the President andthe people of Washington. The strongest desire of the District as a whole, of the few citizens who are candidates, and especially of the great mass who are not candidates, is to put a check upon that well-worn slander which represents this community as differing from other American communities in that it is unfit to furnish the men from whom those who regulate its local affairs shall be selected, and which brings upon us and into local offices, through one flimsy excuse or other, a stream of consideration is not of especial consequence, except so far as a local appointment would indicate a department. For this week we specially quote which the District has been subjected. If the President has an inclination to appoint some local democrat to this office, Col. Vilas ought not to the province of the province throw obstacles in the way. The spirit of fairness and an appreciation of established American principles should prevent him, even if he thinks the home-rule plank of the democratic platform does

A correspondent inquires why, if a private vehicle does not need bells to warn pedestrians on a street car? It may be suggested, in answer, of the very delicate colors are slightly faded. There can be no doubt that Washington wishes to retain the fire-bells.

the proverb goes. A man who is naturally inassociates, is under special pressure in a government office, and the fact that he is doing work for a vast quasi-corporation instead of for a private for suspecting that a large number of government the proprieties most scrupulously will doubtless be the first to welcome an investigation which will remove from them every shadow of the general doubt and suspicion.

The effect of mustering the various separate troops of citizen soldiery into a compact District are daily forming new companies. All this is a wholesome sign. Should the curse of war ever descend again upon the country, the national attack, and then the presence of a well disciplined home guard will be appreciated. The aim of the Fiftieth Congress ought to be to see, not how little it can nd on army, navy and fortifications, but how much it can do with such money as it has at its

If yesterday's terrible railway accident in Province Ontario had been the first of its kind there would have been more excuse for it; but, unfortunately, this is not so. The annals of death and destruction on the rail contain several instances where the wreck of oil trains has added fresh horrors to an already bad catastrophe. It may be impossible to prevent collisions on the rail as long as human nature is not above mistakes and the machinery for starting and stopping trains is not absolutely perfect. But it does seem possible to find some safer method of conveying petroleum from place to place than transportation in huge tanks, as is now done so commonly in parts of the country through which pipe-line communication is impracticable. In Nebraska, at an A CARD. earlier hour on the same day, occurred an accident resembling in its main features the one in Canada, though the number of lives lost is supposed to have been much less. In this case there was a positively inexcusable act of recklessness on the part of the railway managers in permitting passengers to travel on a train to which oil cars were attached. This is a practice which is almost universally discountenanced, and ought to be absolutely forbidden by law in Nebraska, if it is not already. General Sherman could not get into the citadel at Hallfax yesterday. ## PREPARATORY TO ENLARGING.

Within a few weeks we shall lose, owing to the taking down of west wall, a great deal of the counter and shelf room we now have. As we have not had since the opening of the store half room enough, it does not require much calculation to show that our stock must be reduced to less than half its present size, therefore sweeping reductions will be made throughout the entire stock, thus offering purchasers such an opportunity as we think pever before occurred, inasmuch as our stock is not the accumulation of years, but is entirely new and fresh.
